

WHOA! 56 L.A. County Cities Have No Money To Pay For Retiree Healthcare

Grace Wyler | Jul. 7, 2011, 10:36 AM | 1,493 | 5

Recommend 65

Share 3

20

0

AAA

Los Angeles County, Calif., has almost completely neglected to fund retiree healthcare benefits for public-sector employees, according to a startling new report from a Civil Grand Jury, which in California investigates the county and municipal governments on an annual basis.

The report — aptly titled "Whoa! The State of Public Pensions In Los Angeles County" — found that at least 56 of L.A. County's 88 cities have not funded retiree healthcare at all.

You read that right. They have set aside exactly $0.00 to pay for health benefits promised to their retirees.

The Grand Jury states that the combined unfunded retiree healthcare liability for L.A. County and its cities is about $33.9 billion. With only $3.7 billion in combined assets, the retiree healthcare plans are only 10.8% funded.

The largest portion of that liability — about 71% — is held by the L.A. County government, which has an unfunded benefit obligation of $24 billion.

Surprisingly, the City of Los Angeles is better off than most of the county's municipalities — L.A.'s three benefit plans are, on average, 52% funded. That's still well below the 80% funding level considered healthy for public benefit plans.

To solve the retiree healthcare problem, the Grand Jury notes that "there may be some opportunity to modify benefits for both future and current employees," depending on how those benefits and contracts are structured.

Given the political might of California's public employee unions, the task is much easier said than done.

h/t LA Weekly

Please follow Politics on Twitter and Facebook.

Follow Grace Wyler on Twitter.

Image: Wikimedia Commons

See Also:

The Top Six Winners And Losers Of This Year's State Budget Battles

Atlanta's Huge Pension Overhaul Is Major Win For Public Pension Reform

Minnesota Lawmakers In "Cooling-Off Period" As Shutdown Continues

Tags: State & Muni, Los Angeles, Unions, Health Care, Pension Crisis, City Government | Get Alerts for these topics »

Share:

Short URL <http://read.bi/puc1Vz>